A Display Of Discipline.

Ingrime canal to irrigate about 20,000 acres of measy water and some power for El Paso has been successful so far.

The project has been endorsed in a general way and the chamber of commerce has arranged to have it examined in detail and reported upon by Louis C. Hill, a Los Angeles engineer, who had mest to do with the construction of the Resonwell dam in Arisona. He was chief engineer of that project for the reclamation service. Mr. Hill is also familiar with the Elephant Butte project, both the dam and the land to be embraced in the irrigated area. None could be better qualified than he to investigate the feasibility of the high line canal.

The questien immediately confronting the public is whether or not the high line canal will accomplish what its supporters claim for it; whether it will provide for the irrigation of the mesa land; whether two power those plants could develop; how much water could project. A comprehensive survey having been made by the reclamation service, Mr. Hill, who is a hydroelectire expert, will examine the mass of information secured and report upon it.

If engineer Hill randers a favorable report, that report, seeled by his figures, will furnish a government to take hold of this addition to the Elephant Butte project and coordrust it.

While the task of convincing Washington of the desirability of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future, stilly of a high line canal is somewhat far in the future

LOVE my country dearly, for her Pd die and bleed; Pd lose a leg, or nearly, to help her in her need. I love our starry hanner, that flutters, bright and pay, and in a hervent manner I praise it every day. No man does louder spining, or uses wands more fine; I'm so worked up with feeling, I often shed some brine. Pine words! You do not need 'em, but ask me if Pll buy some U. & honds of freedom—I'd rather bleed and die. My life I do not cheriah, I'm ready now to go to some red fields and perish, if that will beat the foe. But when you ask for money, that is snother tale; ask me for lifeblood, sonny, but do not ask for kale. I'd hravely face the foeman, and swat him till he fall, or looked to the market of his fodder don't forget the other wild animals. "Hotel accommodations in Phoenix are at a premium," said P. E. Barnes, "Travelers and tourists passing through the Arisona capital are lucky to get any kind of a room, and as to getting any choice in the matter, that is almost impossible. The Adams hotel there is adding three more stories, which will relieve conditions somewhat, but on the whole I believe that one or two more hotels in that city would not find it hard to fill their fooms."

Allow me to eccond judge Sweeney's suggestion that his county commissioners go slow in repetting the blunders of former commissioners in the recoliding of the Yeleta read.
From my observation, extending from El Paso to California and from San Diego to San Prancisco, cement is the only material out of which to build roads, for it is impervious to the phanges of the wenther, it bears traffic well, is more enaily repaired, should be cheaper than any other kind of puring, and we who pay the taxes ought to have something to say as to the character of roads that should be built, providing our experience justifies our judgment in the matter.

"Little Rock, Ark, Peb. 4.—Bring-ing liquor into the state is not a violation of the bone dry law, seconding to the state supreme court today, which ruled that if liquor is personally brought into the state to be sold convictions can be obtained under the statewide prohibition law. If for personal use the act did not constitute an offense under either law."
